7 reasons a Facebook page can't replace a small business website:

- Facebook makes changes all the time. A page you like today might look like a mess tomorrow.
- Facebook is big, but Google is bigger. Google processes 3.5 billion users searches per day. Facebook pages don't index very well on Google. Your own website is the best way to get found.
- Once a Facebook user likes your page, most likely he will NEVER return to your page again.
- Facebook is just a starting point. If Facebook users are interested in your business, most will search for your business website.
- Most Facebook users will only see the most recent post. On your website potential customers can visit for all the information and products they're looking for.
- Facebook has limitations. On a website you can structure and prepare your content and information the way it suits your business best.
- You need to invest a lot of time to make Facebook work for your business. If a Facebook page is not updated regularly it looks "old". A website doesn't need to be updated that frequently.
